HOMAGE TO HOLY GHOSTOdd Celebration
at Catholic
Mission.TWELVE MEN
AT A FEASTScores Received Sign of Cross
on Foreheads at Confirmation.

THOUSANDS of Portuguese thronged the grounds of the Catholic Mission all day yesterday and Saturday evening to lay their spiritual homage at the foot of the shrine of the Holy Ghost, renew their devotion to the church and reverence the sainted Isabella of Portugal. For two days gay fluttering banners and streamers, flags of Portugal and emblems of the church and societies of Portuguese flaunted to the breeze from gaily-painted poles, all forming a scintillating and kaleidoscopic avenue to a shrine erected just in front of the house of the clergy and close to the moss and fern-clothed fountain. Here was centered all the tangible things that represented the Holy Ghost and the vows of Isabella. It was a small portable shrine, at one end of which was an altar glittering in the flames from dozens of highly-colored candles which were surrounded by masses of gaudy imitations of flowers.

In a raised space before the shrine a table was arranged upon which were laid plates for the twelve poor men chosen to dine, and there was a plenteous of fruits, bread, cakes, meats, wines and flowers. Suspended from the ceiling was an immense basket formed of fruits and ferns, which was sold yesterday afternoon at auction. Suspended from it were also four decanters of wine. On Saturday evening the Hawaiian band was in attendance, and to a gladsome burst of music the Bishop of Honolulu, with the clergy, members and officers of the Irmandade do Espirito Santo, or Brotherhood of the Holy Ghost, and the multitude marched in procession to the shrine where the foods were blessed.

Yesterday morning at 7 o'clock the sanctified foods were distributed to the poor and deserving. At 10 o'clock the bishop officiated at High Pontifical mass. The banner of the Holy Ghost was carried before the bishop and the journey to the door of the church was very slow, as the multitude pressed forward eagerly to kiss the red banner or the embroidered dove upon it. Men, women and children strove for a place near the banner, crowding and surging in the way of the procession. In the many years that the people have annually kissed and handled the sacred banner, it has become worn and threadbare, little holes showing in the lower hem. The bishop carried the crown, symbolic of that which Isabella laid upon an altar, into which the people dropped dollars in a steady stream.

At 1 o'clock six Portuguese and six Hawaiian old men, all attired in suits of white duck, were led into the raised part of the shrine. The table was laden, and there were men waiting to bring on tureens of steaming soup and hot meats from the kitchen of the mission. Finally, when the Holy Ghost banner and the crown were returned to the shrine the crown basin was filled almost to overflowing with money. The bishop entered the space, accompanied by the Portuguese Consul, Senor Cana, Varro, and the French Consul, Mons. A. Viazavona, and took a seat at one end of the table, the two Consuls seating themselves on either side of him. After the blessing, and to the tune of "La Marseillaise" and the Portuguese national anthem, the twelve men began to feast. Members of the Irmandade Society attended to their wants. It was a strange sight and thousands of people surged about the pavilion eager to catch a glimpse of the favored ones bidden to the feast.

At 3 o'clock confirmation services were held in the Cathedral, and during the time the doors were locked to prevent the crowds entering and leaving, thereby interrupting the service. Scores of fathers and mothers with children ranging from the merest babes to those about to become young men and women, stood and knelt before the altar rail awaiting their turns to receive the sign of the cross upon their foreheads. The babies cried and for awhile Bedlam seemed to have broken loose. Some of the little ones were lumpy-jumped and rent the air with their cries. Within the altar space the bishop stood, arrayed in beautiful vestments of cloth of gold and carrying his crozier, surrounded by several of his clergy and altar boys. Before him was a dense mass of humanity, sometimes more than twenty-five clinging to the rail at a time, and behind them were lines nine and ten deep. When those at the rail were marked with the sign of the cross, their places were at once taken by others behind, and so continued the services for nearly an hour. With ointment the cross was made upon the foreheads, and a priest following closely behind the bishop wiped it away with a cloth.

At length the last one was confirmed, the doors were opened and the throng passed out again into the grounds filled with the gaily-dressed crowds. At the shrine a member of the Portuguese society commenced an auction of fruits, chickens, vegetables and other edibles, and much money was thus added to the fund for the entertainment. A vesper service yesterday evening with a concert by the band completed the celebration.

The shrine is intended to represent a palace such as the one to which Isabella, Queen of Portugal, journeyed to about 800 years ago. There she made a vow that during her lifetime she would observe a feast upon the same day every year as a reverent devotion to the Holy Ghost. In order that her vow would be accomplished by the symbols of authority to give it more weight, she laid her scepter and crown upon an altar and money and gifts were provided for the poor. At the death of the Queen her faithful subjects continued to observe the day and it has been observed ever since without a break.

VOLCANO NOT ACTIVE.

Some Fire Showing But No Lake
Has Formed.

Volcano House, May 15, 1902.

Editor Advertiser: As reports may reach you that the volcano is active, I wish to tell you the exact facts so the public may not be misled. During the past week fire has been seen in a small crack on the side of the pit, which comes in flashes, but no lake has formed as yet. Very truly yours,
F. WALDRON.

Angry Bull at Large.

The attention of the poundmaster is called to a herd of cattle, led by a vicious bull, that has been wandering over College Hills and adjacent tracts of late. Saturday night the bull and eight cows raided John Effinger's place on Manoa Heights and damaged garden and trees. The night before the bull became angry when driven out of an adjoining yard and charged an embankment, tossing the dirt on his horns and bellowing. A shot was taken at him but it missed. It is the pound-keeper's duty to corral the whole herd, as its presence on the public highway is both a nuisance and a danger.

FIGHTING for life with a half-crazed Japanese, under the moonlight, Andrew Cox, Deputy Sheriff at Waialua, last evening safely landed in the court house detention cells there, Kimura, who, if he lives, will have to answer for the murder of Kane, a Japanese woman, whom the blood-thirsty brown man slew after spending the day driving about with her.

The murder, attempted suicide and struggle for life came as a sequel to the ordinary collections among the Japanese laborers of the plantation, conducted yesterday by the woman, Kane was the wife of a Japanese storekeeper, Yamamada by name. Early yesterday he sent her out with the assistant in the store, Kimura, to make the collections. All day the two drove about, gathering up the various small sums which were owing, and although the sum of money that the woman had about her cannot be known, it was sufficient to tempt her companion of the day to murder her for it.

It was about 8 o'clock last evening when a passer-by saw the wagon of Yamamada standing between the court house and the school house at Waialua. The horse was eating grass by the roadside and there seemed to be no one in the conveyance. Upon making a closer inspection, however, the body of Kane was discovered in the bottom of the wagon, dead, her throat having been cut from ear to ear. Deputy Sheriff Cox was summoned and he identifying the wagon, went at once to the store and discovered who had been in the company of the woman during the day. This done, the search for Kimura was taken up.

The trail was an easy one to locate and within a half hour after the finding of the body Cox was upon the scent of his man. The trail was hot and led to the upper reservoir, next the mountains back of Waialua, and there, mauka of the water, the Japanese was discovered. He knew that he would be followed and so had secured an old muzzle-loading musket, a rice gun, as the variety of weapon is called. When he was discovered he at once brought his batteries to bear upon the deputy. The officer thought parley was the proper course, and so he began to talk of the certainty of capture.

It was not very long after the talking began that Cox persuaded the Japanese to lower the gun so that they could continue their talk in friendly terms. Finally the Japanese lowered the muzzle and almost on the instant Cox rushed him. He was so quick that he managed to get hold of the gun and prevent its discharge. But he could not hold gun and man, and, twitching free, Kimura drew a knife and deliberately cut away at his own throat in almost the same manner as the wound had been inflicted upon the woman. Again Cox was watching and with another desperate rally took the knife away from the Japanese, who, after slashing himself, tried to end the life of the officer.

Meantime help arrived and the Japanese, with the wound in his throat, was conveyed to the court house, where he was attended by a physician. He was found to be painfully injured. This is due to the complete severing of the windpipe, although there were none of the arteries cut. While the physicians say the man is badly off they believe that he will pull out, owing to his magnificent.

This morning Cox will bring with him to the city the Japanese, and the sufferer will be detained in the Queen's Hospital for the purpose of awaiting the result of his wounds.

While on the way back from the plantation reservoir Kimura is alleged to have made a complete confession to Deputy Sheriff Cox. He admitted the murder and theft and pleaded that he had been drinking.

THE THOROUGHBREDS ARE BUSY AT THE RACE TRACK

Some noteworthy performances marked the workouts at the track Saturday. McAllister sent Weller a mile in 1:37½, the sorrel sulking on a first attempt in anything but an encouraging manner. The second time off he ran a trifle more generously, but not as races are run. Weller is a lazy custommer, however, and must have something racing alongside him before he will exert himself.

General Cronje worked a mile and three-eighths in 2:40, covering the mile and a quarter in 2:25. Del Vista was sent seven furlongs in 1:34½. Nullah worked a half in :50½, and continuing on to the five-furlong pole was snapped in 1:05½. Carter H. Harrison, Jr., galloped a mile at a two-minute gait and brushed through the stretch.

SteamploUGH was given several slow heats, the best being 2:27. He went to the half in 1:13, and, breaking badly, was slowed down. The time at the three-quarters was 1:51½, the black coming down the stretch in 33½ seconds. Quinn gave Cyclone a mile in 2:30½, first quarter, :38½; the first half, 1:12. The big black walked under the wire. The mysterious one turned another heat in 2:27½, and is a good lame horse. Callan drove Edna G. heats in 2:27½ and 2:38.

Violin, with Costello up, worked miles in 2:30, 2:27, 2:25. If Cupid's mare gets back to legitimate pacing she should show her heels to all competitors in the event for amateur reinsmen. Singlefooting, 2:24 is about her limit.

A big crowd visited headquarters yesterday morning and witnessed some limited but interesting work. Abidine, W. H. Smith driving, and Edie Logan, Cunningham behind, worked heats together in 2:31½ and 2:31½. In one heat Edie came from the half in 1:12 and did the final quarter in :33½. Captain Soule worked Artie W. a heat in 2:35. Lincoln Gray drove old Frank Murphy once round in 2:37. Wait-a-Little worked in 2:40.

McClellan's black runner, Rejected, by Sobrante, arrived from Hilo on Saturday by the Kinau and has been added to Burns' string. The old horse looks very well and his presence will be a decided acquisition, especially when taking into consideration the very limited number of runners in training this year.

The Jockey Club meets at the Hawaiian Hotel tonight for the purpose of considering a number of very important matters. The date of closing entries will be considered, also the advisability of adding special races to the program, including races for Hawaiian bred runners, trotters and horses that have never started in a harness race. In the latter class are Billy Lemps, Oak Grove and Edie Logan.

John Oudekirk has arranged to drive SteamploUGH a heat on Wednesday. He intends to enter this horse in the gentlemen's driving race and is desirous of finding out for himself just how good or how bad the shave-tail is. Mr. Oudekirk says that he will be satisfied if his horse shows him 2:25 when he drives him. SteamploUGH, it will be remembered, went wrong last year just when his prospects were brightest. SteamploUGH, so far, has been nursed along and in view of the fact that he is being trained for a day's and not a season's racing, this is surely the wisest course to pursue and to continue to pursue.

W. M. Cunningham will, it is said, send Trump after the $400 Maui free-for-all.

There is some talk of the Jockey Club giving a ball on the night of June 11. Should this be done it would greatly help out the club's finances, which are at present about $3000 to the bad. If every member were given tickets to dispose of, there is little doubt but that $1000 or more could be realized by the dance. This would help pay some of the club's moss-covered indebtedness and would be a step in the direction of good purses next season.

WILLIS OFF
TO TONGALeaves on Ventura
For His New Post.IOLANI COLLEGE
CLOSED SATURDAYBishop of Honolulu Tells His Plans for the Future to Advertiser Readers.

BISHOP Alfred E. Willis will leave in the Ventura May 28 for Tutuila, from whence he sails to Tonga via Apia. The bishop has made all arrangements to leave next week, having packed his household goods and booked for the steamer.

Iolani College was closed Saturday. It had still been open to a few students since the transfer of the authority to the Episcopal church in the Islands, but Saturday the last boarder left and the school room was closed forever, as no arrangements have been made to continue the old school. A few of the pupils are attending the Cathedral School, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Fitz, but the majority has scattered, and even though an effort was made to reopen the institution it would be difficult to get the old students together again.

"I intend to leave for Tonga in the Ventura, May 28," said Bishop Willis last evening. "I shall locate at Nukualofa, which is the capital of Tonga. There are about two hundred Englishmen there, and they have extended an invitation for me to come and start a church there. I am not going on any special mission from the Church of England, though I am still a bishop of the church. Once a bishop always a bishop, you know."

"This will not be my first visit to the Tonga group. I visited the Islands in 1897 at the request of the bishop of London. This may be only a visit now, for I do not know what I shall do, and whether my residence there will be permanent. I expect, though, to form a church in Tonga, for that is the reason I am going there. I have nothing to bind me to Hawaii now, and shall not return here, but go on to New Zealand in case my stay in Tonga proves unsuccessful."

"The Hawaiian people know but very little about the Tonga or Friendly group of Islands. They are known as the Friendly Islands, just as the Hawaiian Islands were called Sandwich Islands by Captain Cook. Cook named the Tonga group so, because the natives were so friendly. The Tongas are an independent people and have an independent kingdom with a British protectorate. At the time Germany and the United States divided Samoa, England assumed a protectorate over Tonga. George Tabu is the present King and he is a well educated man, having received his training in Sydney. The language of the natives is very much the same as that of the Hawaiians. There are probably 20,000 natives in the group. At Nukualofa there are 200 Englishmen and a number of Germans. It is there I intend to locate—the capital city of the group. The natives were converted to Christianity some years ago by the English Wesleyans, but there is no Episcopal church in the Islands. The principal industry is the manufacture of copra from the coconut, the copra being shipped to New Zealand in bulk, where it is manufactured into soap.

"Mrs. Willis will accompany me on the trip. We go first to Tutuila on the Ventura, which is the nearest place the Oceanic boats can take us. From there we go in a small boat to Apia, where we have to wait a fortnight for the regular monthly steamer to Tonga. The Union Pacific steamers make a circle of the various groups monthly, going from Sidney to Samoa, Fiji and Tonga.

"I have not disposed of my place here, but will leave it in the hands of an agent for that purpose. Iolani School was closed up Saturday, my last two pupils leaving at that time. When the change came we knew it was no longer possible to continue the school and the boarding pupils began dropping away one and two at a time. No arrangements were made to continue the college, so it was necessary to abandon it."
